

Editorial

In this editorial I would like to emphasize two facts. First, COGENCY has some good news to share with you: from this moment on, the Journal is included in 9 international indexes: Latindex; Dialnet; Modern Language Association International Bibliography–Directory of Periodicals; International Directory of Philosophy (Philosophy Documentation Center); Elektronische Zeitschriftenbibliothek EZB (Electronic Journals Library); Genamics Journal Seek; NewJour. Electronic Journals & Newsletters; Philosophical Journals on the web; WorldCat OCLC.

Second, COGENCY continues its improvements by adding an Ethical Statement which contains the declaration of all the scientific orientations that guide the ethical practices of the editorial team, administrative staff, and reviewers.

As is the tradition, in this issue COGENCY publishes contributions that discuss different topics within the realm of argumentation theory, psychology of reasoning, theoretical linguistics, and rhetoric, using empirical data to support their claim. We hope to contribute to the expansion of this field which addresses, in our view, important social uses.
